Trauma Informed Approach to Field Nursing (TIA) Home Visiting

Trauma Informed Approach to Field Nursing (TIA) serves pregnant clients and parent(s) of child(ren) who are 0-5 years old who could use additional support from a Public Health Nurse to improve their health and wellbeing as well as resolve a barrier to a social driver of health. Typically, these visits occur in the home but may occur in any location based upon the preference and needs of the client. Visits involve assessing the client's physical and mental health and medical needs, as well as identifying barriers to accessing medical services, and/or needed resources, working with the client to remove barriers to health, and providing mental health assessments for the parents and developmental screenings for the children. A defining characteristic of the TIA model is its foundational incorporation of Adverse Childhood Experiences (ACES) model and assessment. The overall goal of the TIA PHN is to assist vulnerable families in reducing the stressors that may lead to ACEs and in building resilience capacity.
